

Study Abroad in England No Longer Breaks the Bank

ISA Program Prices Decrease for London and Reading Programs

AUSTIN, Texas, April 14 /PRNewswire-USNewswire/-- International Studies Abroad (ISA), a leading provider of study abroad programs since 1987, has lowered the price of its Fall 2009 and Academic Year 2009/2010 programs at the University of Westminster in London and the University of Reading in Reading, England. As a result of the current global recession, the US Dollar has reached a 23-year high against the British Pound, contributing to a more affordable experience for US students studying abroad in England.

"Students currently enrolled in our Fall or Year programs for 2009 have received a refund and those yet to apply will receive the new, lowered price," says Hannah Hogensen, Site Specialist for ISA's England programs. "We are excited to be able to lower program prices and hope that more students will be able to take advantage of all that England has to offer."

In addition to the new lower prices, ISA's England Resident Director Maria Vuldjeva has created "England on a Budget: A Guide for the Student Traveler." This resource, designed specifically for ISA participants, provides readers with tips on spending wisely in England. During students' on-site orientation, Vuldjeva also shares her intimate knowledge of the UK, highlighting cultural activities, travel resources, restaurants, museums, and shopping areas that offer discounted rates. "With Maria's help, ISA students find their program in England to be truly affordable," says Hogensen.

According to the IIE 2008 Open Doors report, the United Kingdom remains the number one leading destination for U.S. university students studying abroad, hosting over 32,700 students during the 2006/2007 academic year. In decreasing its program prices, ISA looks forward to providing students with a more economical option for study in England.

About ISA

ISA is a leader in international education since its founding in 1987, sending thousands of U.S. and Canadian students abroad each year to Europe, Latin America, the Caribbean, and North Africa. ISA encourages foreign language acquisition, inter-cultural understanding, international awareness, career transformation and personal growth through full-service educational programs of the highest quality at very competitive prices.

For more details about study abroad with ISA, please contact Dominick Luciano at dluciano@studiesabroad.com or visit www.studiesabroad.com.

SOURCE International Studies Abroad (ISA)